

Thank you for your inquiry regarding S&C's maintenance of business continuity in the wake of recent world events. I understand your urgency and want to respond with the most current information possible.

S&C's mission right now is to maintain manufacturing production and service capabilities to support our customers who depend on us at times like these. Based on the guidance provided from the U.S. CDC and other organizations, we have been implementing a variety of proactive actions to maintain the health and safety of our team members around the world, whilst serving our customer needs. These measures focus on three principles:

- Minimizing Interpersonal Contact
- Sanitizing the Workplace
- Creating Independent Work Teams

Given the nature of events, S&C's specific approach continues to change as new information is made available. Therefore, the best way to answer your questions is to set up a call with you to cover our current plans and discuss if this may impact your business. During the call I will be happy to go through your current orders and future needs.

Currently S&C has no suspect cases of COVID-19 and we continue to work to optimize our manufacturing output. We continue to work with our supply chain to minimize disruption. As of today, we have no major concerns about being able to supply current orders but have clear plans in place to communicate should disruption occur.
